

Learning together evenings

At Crookhorn, we believe that collaboration with parents is immensely important and as such we invest much time in involving parents in their child's education. Each term you will be sent a letter inviting you to attend one of our 'learning together evenings'. The aim of these evenings is to give parents the skills to continue the support at home which is being provided by the learning support department. The sessions cover a range of different areas each term, such as paired reading with your child; strategies for improving spelling; improving handwriting and effective narrative. Parents are able to sign up for one evening each term. Parents who have attended these evenings have commented on how beneficial they are for helping them to support their child at home with a range of skills. These evenings also provide parents with an opportunity to have an informal chat with the SENCO, and learning support assistants.
